

Presentation de l'éditeur Sigmund Freud, né en 1856 et mort à Londres en 1939, est l'auteur d'une œuvre qui influence de plus en plus profondément l'ensemble des sciences humaines. Créateur de la psychanalyse, il est l'auteur d'une œuvre monumentale, aux innombrables prolongements et qui influence de plus en plus profondément l'ensemble des sciences humaines : médecine, psychologie, sociologie, philosophie, anthropologie, linguistique, esthétique, etc. Extrait: Additif a Totem et Tabou Les tabous seraient des prohibitions très anciennes qui auraient été autrefois imposées de l'extérieur à une génération d'hommes primitifs (...) Ces prohibitions portaient sur des activités qu'on devait avoir une forte tendance à accomplir (Les peuples primitifs) ont adoptés à l'égard de la prohibition tabou une attitude ambivalente ; leur inconscient serait heureux de freindre ces prohibitions, mais ils craignent de le faire ; et ils le craignent parce qu'ils voudraient le faire, et la crainte est plus forte que le désir. Mais, chez chaque individu faisant parti du peuple, le désir est aussi inconscient que chez le névrosé. (p. 43 édition petite bibliothèque Payot) On n'a pas encore trouvé de peuple auquel manque la croyance aux esprits (p. 107) Freud applique les instruments qu'il a mis au point pour la psychanalyse (refoulement, Oedipe, névrose...) à la vie sociale des peuples primitifs. La tentative est de découvrir comment ont pu naître les tabous (interdictions sociales sans fondement apparents), qui persistent encore dans nos sociétés sous des formes évoluées. Le premier chapitre la peur de linceste, rappelle que cette transgression est le seul interdit que l'on retrouve dans toutes les sociétés. Il explique aussi comment des sociétés primitives sont organisées en totems, c'est à dire groupes familiaux (le totem est héréditaire) prenant pour symbole un animal, une plante, un élément naturel...
