Everything else happening around us? It doesn't mean shit." Life is made up of hills and valleys, but fate Never did say that I'd get stuck in a rut like this. It's my turn now, mine, and I'm supposed to be happy. I've got Ty McCabe, my dark butterfly, my prince in a crown of thorns, so why is there all of this blood and this bullshit? What ever happened to happily ever after? But I'm different now. Stronger. I won't sit back and watch everything fall away. This time, instead of running, I'm going to fight. I'm going to fight with everything and then some because I have my soul mate, my son, my sisters. I finally have a life worth fighting for, and I won't give it up. Not even to fate. This, this is how I want to die, lying next to the love of my life with the gritty perfection of bad boy and cigarettes and f*cking soap filling my nostrils. I'll die happy then, truly I will. "Will you still love me when I'm old and wrinkled?" I whisper randomly. Everybody has these thoughts at some point, don't they? I have no idea why I decide to ask this question at this exact moment, but I do. Maybe it's because I know Ty will give me the answer I want to hear. What I don't say, but that he probably already knows, is that lying next to him like this is the most soothing balm my twisted soul could ever ask for. Sleeping next to a guy, knowing him, not f*cking him. It's the most intimate thing I've ever done. And the fact that I have Tys baby inside of me? My stomach explodes into a swarm of butterflies, and I actually feel nervous being around him, excited. I hope this feeling never fades. Ty pulls me just a little bit closer, hugs me a little tighter. "I'll love you because you're old and wrinkled. Nev, some people get freaked out at the thought of being old, but you know what? If you get that far, you should just consider yourself lucky. I'd rather die old and toothless in your arms than drop dead tomorrow. Sure, I'd leave a pretty corpse, but it wouldn't be worth it. Each second with you is a f*cking gift." I laugh, lifting up his shirt with my left hand, so I can lay my fingers against bare skin. "You're too much, you know that? Do you come up with this sh*t on the fly or plan your lines in advance?" "Um, I'm a bad boy, remember? I got lines for days, baby cakes."
